MABPRO: A Relentless Pursuit of Safety.

At MABPRO International, our pursuit of excellence is relentless when it comes to Safety. Our Students expect that from us, and we demand that from ourselves. When I think of safety, my first thought is of the front-line responder. That individual needs as much help as he or she can get in making that safe choice and keeping patients, staff, and the public free of harm.

Our profession can be complicated, and the patients we serve can be complicated. Helping can sometimes come with risk.

We all understand the realities of caring for people during their most vulnerable life moments, and through their most challenging behavioral instances. We understand your mission and we share in your efforts to develop the safest in response team capability.

Safety is – and always has been – our top priority. There is no greater responsibility for us than to deliver instruction to you and your employees in a safe, professional, and practical manner.

I am immensely proud of our record of reliability during our over 30-year history. Out of all major crisis response programs, we continue to stand out as the premier, customizable service modality for any industry. So how do we do it? I credit the MABPRO Instructor Network filled with dedicated individuals, very much like yourself, who have a vision of the highest quality of life through the highest quality of care. Care must have a focus on safety, and training helps us focus on caring. It allows us to lead with information when crisis response and reality intersect and demand the very best we have to offer.

Our workplaces are facing an epidemic of violence. To meet these high acuity demands, our need for training, dialog, and response options has never been higher or the risk greater. MABPRO is here to help, let's learn together how to have difficult conversations, respond to difficult situations, and influence conflict moments away from crisis. Nothing in life is guaranteed, no one option resolves all things, but together as a team we can help lead with information toward better outcomes. You deserve that from your favorite training partner, and it's our pleasure to deliver.

Respectfully,

Darrell McLaughlin

Who We Are:

Management of Assaultive Behavior (MAB) provides staff with an effective framework for preventing, de-escalating, and increasing safety when responding to crisis behavior. The program will focus on what's happening from three perspectives: the person in distress, the responder, and the response team. Students will gain a comprehensive range of crisis communication, assessment, and planning capabilities to help them manage their emotional responses and identify the escalation stages and behaviors in others.

The MABPRO philosophy is one of patient-centered focus supporting a needs-met approach through safety in individual and team response. The goal is to help prevent or eliminate the need for physical intervention through proactive risk management training. MAB is built on a foundation of reality, the capability of response is enhanced with industry-proven methods of de-escalation and conflict management. The MAB modality realistically addresses the serious issue of workplace violence and provides the staff with CORE MAB Principles and techniques to professionally respond. All stages of response are supported through training which covers in-depth prevention and de-escalation, the stages of escalation, the crisis apex, and post-crisis recovery and review.

Why MAB?

Workplace violence is on the rise, and in some industries, it can seem like an epidemic. Workplace violence is a serious issue that affects businesses of all sizes. In 2020, there were over 450,000 workplace violence incidents reported to the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA). Of those incidents, 85% were physical assaults and 15% were threats of violence.

Workplace violence can have a devastating impact on businesses. In addition to the physical and emotional toll on employees, workplace violence can also lead to lost productivity, increased insurance premiums, and damage to a company's reputation.

Workplace violence is a serious issue, but it can be prevented. By taking steps to address the risk factors for workplace violence, employers can create a safe and productive work environment for all employees. One of those first steps is to be prepared by training employees on how to be professional, proactive, and knowledgeable crisis responders.

Some of our professions deal with patient and public contact that is inherently high in acuity due to the support and services that they offer. We can not always control or predict what patients, or members of the public, will do. So what can we do...we can train. We can train to help influence situations, to better understand people, to communicate in ways that help meet the needs of those in conflict, and we can control how we respond.

What we do...

MABPRO's mission is to eliminate workplace violence and empower healthcare professionals with the tools to do so. Our training focuses on the basic human behavior that takes place before, during, and after the crisis. A large portion of workplace violence can be prevented with training that improves your team's overall situational awareness. In most cases, the crisis will not escalate if everyone on the team understands and agrees on the correct step forward.

"For decades we have been helping people across the United States as the original MAB (Management of Assaultive Behavior) program, founded in 1976. The principles we teach improve safety and mitigate risk for businesses and agencies of all sizes. Our training is modular and customizable to meet the needs of your employees."
